Wedding Bells Are Ringing!

Some Wedding Planning Advice

Step away from the bridal magazines and get out of wedding-planning world for a minute. The real preparation for the Big Day is looking at your relationship. How will you keep your partnership strong? How will you maintain your happy partnership bliss...and how can you rekindle that bliss if you're incredibly stressed about the invitations and the flowers and the cake and how crazy everything has been lately?

The answer is starting a new relationship tradition...right now. It could be having Sunday morning brunch together, designated as a No Wedding Talk hour. Each Sunday, you'll cuddle up in bed with a breakfast tray and the morning paper, or go out for breakfast at a restaurant, brunch or the local bagel shop.

It'll be the Sunday morning treat you'll look forward to all week. That's how easy it is to start a new relationship tradition. It's bonding time, where you're You and You, not Bride- and Groom-to-Be. You'll talk, you'll laugh, you'll catch up on the latest reality shows, whatever you'd like.

This is your Couple Time to create any way you'd like. And after the wedding, you'll keep it going as a #1 key to maintaining the closeness of your relationship, not letting work schedules and To-Do lists (or the kids you'll have someday) crowd you out of your own intimacy.

When you're ready to look for your reception site and you want to feel the comfort of planning your event with a close friend, visit us. We'll take great care in the process of turning your wedding dreams into reality.

Featured Entertainer John Devlin

Who is John Devlin, and what is he about? Do you have an hour? I didn't think so. For our purposes, let's relate primarily to the acoustical guitarist part of this accomplished musical chameleon, fine vocalist, and multi-instrumentalist.

John began his long ride in the acoustic guitar scene in the early 1970s performing at a variety of coffee houses with an impressive list of duos and trios. In the late 70s, he broke into the Bull Market/Shag's Pub circuit. At Shag's, he hosted his first of several legendary open stages, which began in October of 1978, and lasted into early 1983. His long list of gigs include numerous appearances in Chicago and throughout the Midwest. He has also done stints in Alaska, Arizona, Hawaii, and as far away as Australia.

John continues his prolific gigging in the Chicago-Metro area, flying solo and appearing in duos with such fine partners as Mari Dietel, Pat Kelly, and Nancy Dowd, with whom he performs at church weddings, funerals, etc. He also appears with the popular club band Moco Magana. Lastly, he has recently hooked up with the highly acclaimed Irish band Dyed in the Wool, with whom he records and performs as a bass guitarist.
