Good News for White Wine Drinkers

White wine confers heart benefits similar to those touted for red wine, according to a study by Dipak Das of the University of Connecticut School of Medicine and his colleagues at the University of Milan. Previously, scientists believed that grapes' beneficial antioxidants were found mainly in the skins. Red wine is made with both grape pulp and skins, but the skins are removed in making white wine. Das's research showed that the flesh of grapes provided the same levels of heart-protecting compounds as the skins. Not only that, other research at the State University of New York at Buffalo has shown that white wine contains anti-inflammatory substances and antioxidants that improve lung function and can help bone and joint diseases.
